Mass communication Wikipedia

Advertising, in relation to mass communication, is marketing a product or service in a persuasive manner that encourages the audience to buy the product or use the service. Because advertising generally takes place through some form of mass media, such as television, studying the effects and methods of advertising is relevant to the study of mass communication.

Understanding Mass Media and Mass Communication

Mass media as an idea was created in the 1920s. There are three major forms of traditional mass media: print, broadcast, and cinema. New forms are being created constantly. The internet has changed the nature of mass media by creating consumers who control and even create media of their own, and producers who can more easily track consumer
